ISAN 2026 – INTRODUCTION

The International Society for Autonomic Neuroscience (ISAN) came to life at a meeting in Melbourne in 1994 to represent both academic and industrial scientists at the forefront of autonomic research. The common goal is to further understand the diversity of the autonomic nervous system and its dysfunction in health and disease. The official journal of the society is Autonomic Neuroscience: Basic & Clinical edited by Elsevier and attracting papers covering both basic and clinical autonomic neuroscience.

The European Federation of Autonomic Societies (EFAS) is an umbrella society founded in 1997 in London, UK. EFAS hosts national societies for autonomic neuroscience societies. The aim is to establish a platform for scientists and clinicians with interests in autonomic neuroscience physiology, disorders and treatment.

ISAN 2026 will be the first meeting held in Italy since Stresa in 2015 (followed by a world tour of North & South America, Europe, Japan and Australia). We invite you to join ISAN 2026 in Bologna, Italy, for the chance to connect and network with 400-500 attendees from all over the world. The program will include 24 symposia, four keynote lectures, four poster sessions and a practical workshop for young scientists.

ISAN and EFAS bring together a diverse community of clinical and basic scientists, covering a wide range of topics from fundamental autonomic neuroscience to translational research and therapeutic advancements. Key topics will include:

- Autonomic Nervous System (ANS) function & dysfunction
- Neurophysiology of autonomic control
- Cardiovascular autonomic control
- Pharmacological interventions for autonomic disorders
- Dysautonomia and neurodegenerative diseases
- Stress & autonomic responses
- Interaction between the ANS and immune system
- Development & plasticity of the ANS
- Vagal nerve stimulation for treatment of different diseases
- Stimulating peripheral nerves to relieve conditions
